Watt hands in resignation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt, embattled for nearly three weeks over his remark about a federal advisory panel, resigned yesterday but will remain in office until President Reagan names his successor.

Watt made the announcement in a cow pasture at a ranch where he has been vacationing near Santa Barbara, Calif., telling reporters "the time has come" to step down.

Reagan accepted the resignation with reluctance and said Watt had done "an outstanding job as a member of my Cabinet and in his stewardship of the natural resources of the nation."

Reagan said Watt "has initiated a careful balance between the needs of people and the importance of protecting the environment. His dedication to public service and his accomplishments as secretary of the interior will long be remembered."

Reagan said Watt informed him of his decision to resign during a telephone call shortly after 5 p.m. EDT.

Watt said he resigned because "our usefulness..has come to an end." His letter of resignation was hand delivered to the president at 6 p.m. EDT.

There was no immediate word on Watt's successor. But White House aides have said for the past several days that candidates included former Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyoming; J.J. Simmons, a black Democrat, who works at Interior; and Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, a former Interior Department official.

The controversy was touched off Sept. 21 when Watt told a chamber of Commerce breakfast that an Interior Department advisory committee contained "a black..a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

The remark prompted several Republican senators to demand his resignation and led Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to propose a formal resolution calling for Watt to resign.

Environmentalists say:

Watt's antagonism had some benefits

Watt, public enemy No. 1 to the environmentalist, was also in many respects their best ally. In the 2½ years since he took office they have seen their membership roles swell as the issues of concern to them were debated as never before in the news media.

As Watt's decision to quit drew nearer, several environmentalists said they would not celebrate his departure.

"I will be sorry to see Jim Watt go," said Russell Peterson, president of the National Audubon Society. "It is likely that Reagan will replace Watt with a more subtle interior secretary who could do more damage in a shorter time."

Peterson said that Reagan "is the real James Watt."

"Watt was hired by the president to lead an ideological crusade to weaken environmental regulations and to transfer public lands and other public resources into private hands," Peterson said.

Some environmentalists saw Watt as such a political liability to the Reagan administration that they believed his remaining in the Cabinet would make it easier to defeat anti-environmental Republican congessional candidates in 1984.

When leaders of 10 of the environmental groups met in Washington last week to plot strategy, there was open debate over whether Watt should resign.

Bomb kills South Korean officials

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A terrorist bomb apparently meant for South Korean President Chum Doo-hwan ripped through a memorial site Sunday, killing four of his Cabinet ministers, the ambassador to Burma and several top aides.

The governments of Burma and South Korea said 16 South Koreans and three Burmese journalists were killed by the explosion at the Martyr's Mausoleum in Rangoon minutes before Chun arrived for the ceremony. They said at least 48 people were wounded, including two Burmese Cabinet ministers and 15 high-ranking South Koreans.

South Korean officials accused North Korea of engineering the explosion, which devastated the senior leadership of Chun's government. It came on the first day of a scheduled 18-day presidential goodwill tour.

Chun and his wife immediately flew back to Seoul, cancelling the remainder of the trip, Burmese and South Korean officials said. He arrived in Seoul early Monday and immediately entered a series of emergency meetings, officials said.

The Korean Broadcast System showed a film of a grim-faced Chun and his wife arriving at Kimpo international airport in Seoul. Only the state-run television and radio network was permitted into the airport, which was sealed off by the security police.

Before Chun's return, South Korean Prime Minister Kim Sane-hyup held two emergency Cabinet meetings, decreed a nationwide alert for the armed forces and dispatched an emergency medical team to Rangoon to care for the South Korean wounded.

Witnesses and government accounts said Chun's limousine was three minutes away from the memorial site, where he was to lay a wreath, when a tremendous explosion shattered the mausoleum building's roof, sending up a billowing cloud of smoke and engulfing most of the South Korean delegation.

Dozens of South Korean security guards and Burmese buglers assembled to honor the visitors were seen fleeing the wreckage in panic, their shirts soaked in blood.

Weather

Sunny and cool today, temperatures in the mid-50's. Clear and cold tonight, lows in the 30's with frost.

Let's make a deal

"You can't please all of the people all of the time"- but President Ronald Reagan is sure going to give it a try.

Don't forget, election time is drawing near and Reagan needs to buff his image; so he's trying to make everybody happy with his new build-down proposal. A compromise, he thinks, pleasing to all.

While he's pacifying the Pentagon and other such agencies, with support for controversial new weapons programs, he's also placating the American people who are gradually realizing the dangerously thin ice we're now treading on with the strategic arms race issue. For them, President Reagan is living up to his promise to negotiate an arms agreement.

It seems there's something in this proposal for everyone, but unfortunately not enough of anything to make a real difference in arms control. Although, it has won him points with the Democrats and moderate Republicans in Congress, as well as with the tense Europeans likely to get drawn into the prospective mess.

This latest proposal, the fourth in the last seven months, has succeeded though, in being the most complicated. This "build-down is meant to provide a mechanism through which both super-powers can modernize their nuclear forces but which forces them constantly to withdraw more warheads than they add." It will also set various build-down ratios on different weapons to encourage both sides to make more use out of "less threatening" weapons.

A provision has also been inserted, called a "guaranteed annual percentage build-down" in warheads of approximately 5 percent. This provision would force a side not modernizing (the Soviets have more modern weapons now) to cut back on 5 percent of its forces yearly anyway, and continue to for eight to ten years.

And what do the Soviets think of all this? The disapproving eyes of the world have been on them since the downing of the Korean airliner. In a last ditch effort to save face, they've proposed a U.S.-Soviet nuclear weapons freeze. This would mean reduction and eventually complete elimination of nuclear weapons. They proclaim "prevention of nuclear war is the most urgent task of our time." The Soviet Union has challenged the United States to agree to the arms freeze, as this would be an example for the world to follow.

They are now accusing the United States of promoting the strategic arms race and the resulting threat of nuclear war. This is in response to the U.S. plan to deploy U.S. medium range missiles in Europe. Suddenly the Soviet Union is carrying the olive branch in a call for world peace? And it's been turned around so t hat now the United States is portrayed as the bad guy..a threat to peace?

What we have are two super-powers making insincere, haphazard attempts to put an end to the strategic arms race. Both need an image booster, and this is the quickest and easiest way to accomplish that.

What we need is an end to the politicking, and the beginning of an honest effort to promote world peace-for the sole purpose of peace itself.

Some People... by Todd Hannert

Maybe later

To the Editor:

Joe Lazzaro's statement professing Ted Kennedy as a "Reagan-beater" has to be regarded as one of the most idiotic political statements of the year. Doesn't he realize the country has grown more conservative over the last decade? The days of the "great society" programs are over, no candidate can seriously expect to win the presidency at this time while supporting such a platform.

What do you think the real reason was for Ted's early withdrawal from the '84 race? It was because of his disastrous 1980 attempt to beat Jimmy Carter (who was a Reagan landslide victim, remember?). He realizes that he doesn't have the national support to win the Democratic nomination, much less the presidency. His excuse of family responsibility allowed him to save face from another fiasco. The economy has Ronald Reagan's performance rating higher now than at any time over the last two years and relatively very high for the third year of a first term. Maybe in 12 years Ted will enter the race, but a Reagan-beater in '84? Be serious!

Palestinian state threatens Israel

By Felice Farber
Campus Correspondent

The establishment of a Palestinian state on the West Bank would be a threat to Israel's security and existence, Professor Samuel Kassow said at a forum at Hillel House Sunday.

Kassow, a history professor at Trinity College, said that a resolution to the Palestinian refugee problem is desirable, but it cannot be expected to be achieved quickly or smoothly. Kassow said that the formation of a Palestinian state on the West Bank would not solve conflicts in the Middle East.

"The pressure won't stop if Israel gives in to establish ing a Palestinian state"

"The issue in the Mid-East is the existence of the state of Israel, not the borders of the state of Israel, which would have to be altered to allow the formation of a Palestinian state," Kassow said.

Even if the Palestinians, who are represented by the PLO, were to be granted an autonomous state on the West Bank, tension would not vanish from the area, he said. This is because the original hostilities in the Mid-East began with opposition to the state of Israel, not because Israel wouldn't grant the Palestinian Arabs a homeland.

Kassow said that if Israel were to relinquish the West Bank, Arabs would ask for more concessions. "Demands wouldn't stop there," Kassow said. "They'd call for the 1947 partition lines. The pressure won't stop if Israel gives in to establishing a Palestinian state."

Kassow said that Israeli security would be in jeopardy if a Palestinian state came into existence on the West Bank. "With the West Bank in Arab hands, the Israeli city of Tel Aviv could be shelled, Lod airport could be cut off from Israel, and artillery fire could reach 80% of Israel's population," he said.

Kassow said that there is no guarantee that the Palestinian state would be politically stable. He cited the splits and factions in the PLO as an example of Arab political instability. "The leadership of the new state might be in danger of falling apart," he said.

Kassow also said that most Arab states don't want a Palestinian state on the West Bank. The only state that is truly in favor of that is the United Arab Republic (Egypt), he said.

The Palestinian state debate cannot be solved by the annexation of the West Bank by Israel, Kassow said. If Israel were to annex the West Bank, the Arabs would soon outnumber the Jews in Israel.

Because Israel is a democracy, these Arabs would have the vote, he said. Israel would then have to decide between being a Jewish state or a democratic state with an Arab majority. "The Jewish people need a state of their own," Kassow said.

Kassow is not oposed to some sort of Palestinian state on the West Bank, however. He said

"With the West Bank in Arab hands, the Israeli city of Tel Aviv could be shelled, ... and artillery fire could reach 80% of Israel's population"

the best way to achieve it would be to "work with King Hussein of Jordan and seek a combination arrangement; one in which Israel would withdraw forces from the West Bank and the Palesinian Arabs could merge with the Jordanian population."

Total Concern opens door to disabled

By Elaine Christensen
Staff Writer

Money raised by the Miss-a-Meal program will be used to finance more curb cuts, larger handicapped parking spots, and more automatic door openers said LaWanda Cook, vice president of Total Concern.

Total Concern promotes the accessibility of the disabled on campus and is associated with the university's Disabled Student Service Center.

Total Concern has written to Robert Clawson, director of facilities at the physical plant, and asked that automatic door openers be installed in Arjona, Monteith, and McMahon and Buckley dormitories at the organization's expense.

Because these buildings are the ones most widely used by the disabled, the buildings "need to be more accessible to them," said Ted Pinnock, president of Total Concern.

Last year, Total Concern raised $5,350. "Overall student support has been great once the students know what we're doing with the money," said Cook. The automatic door openers will cost Total Concern about $1,000 per door.

In other activity, Total Concern has donated $500 to St. Thomas Aquinas Church to help fund a new ramp for the disabled. The group has also extended the handicapped van hours to 11:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday nights.

"We realize that much of the problem in making the university accessible is that there isn't enough state or federal pressure to make the issue a priority," Cook said. "We want to make sure the rights of the disabled on campus are not being violated," she said.

Membership in Total Concern is not limited to disabled students. All members of the university community are invited to participate.

Two U.S. Marines wounded despite cease-fire in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Two U.S. marines were slightly wounded and a U.S. helicopter was hit by small arms fire Sunday at the Marine encampment near Beirut International Airport.

Some of the American units were put on alert as sporadic exchanges of fire between Shiite Moslem militiamen and the Lebanese army continued in nearby neighborhoods despite the cease-fire in Lebanon's civil war.

U.S. Middle East envoy Robert C. McFarlane met in Damascus with Syria's foreign minister in an effort to strengthen the cease-fire.

Maj. Robert Jordan, a Marine spokesman, said one soldier was hit in the heel Saturday night by a stray round near the main entrance to the Marine's airport encampment.

The other American was shot in the shoulder Sunday morning at the Marine position near the Lebanese Scientific University east of the airport he said.

The two Marines, who were not immediately identified, were treated at the Marine base and released.

Jordan described the shooting as a possible effort to "goad the Marines into action." He said the Marines did not shoot back in either incident.

Also Sunday morning, a U.S. helicopter parked near the Marine camp was struck by small-arms fire, but there were no injuries, Jordan said.

Warrant Officer Charles Rowe said several Marine units remained on alert as "some random shots" were fired throughout the day near the U.S. position at the university.

McFarlane's meeting with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Dhaddam came one day after he briefed Lebanese President Amin Gemayel on efforts to create an international observation force to police the two-week-old cease-fire.

McFarlane returned to Beirut Sunday evening without meeting Syrian President Hafez Assad as some reports in Damascus had said he would.

In addition to seeking agreement on the cease-fire observation force, McFarlane has been discussing plans for a reconciliation conference to debate the distribution of power in Lebanon. The conference has been delayed by disagreement on a site.

Observers from Syria and Saudi Arabia are to attend.

In Paris, Saudi mediator Rafic Hariri met with Raymond Edde, a Maronite Christian liberal who has been living in self-imposed exile in France since surviving three assassination attempts in Beirut in 1977.

American involvement increased according to Honduran soldiers

CATACAMAS, Honduras (AP)—Honduran soldiers patrolling the road to the El Aguacats base outside this mountain town say American troops frequently join them on their search for leftist guerrillas. U.S. military officials deny involvement in the operations.

Joining anti-rebel sweeps would go beyond the announced scope of joint U.S.-Honduran military exercises that started in August and are scheduled to last at least four more months.

The Honduran troops told an Associated Press reporter here that a dozen armed U.S. soldiers were present when 100 government troops trapped the leader of a rebel band and killed him and seven companions. The Hondurans said the Americans did not take part in the firefight.

A U.S. military officer, who spoke on condition he not be identified, denied any knowledge of American troops participating in anti-guerrilla operations. The officer was interviewed in the Honduran capital, Tegucigalpa.

But the American officer confirmed local news reports that U.S. military helicopters shuttled some Honduran troops to the Mosquitia region near the Caribbean coast to cut off any attempt by the rebels to escape back into Nicaragua by that route.

At U.S. Southern Command headquarters in Panama, officials denied any involvement in anti-guerilla operations.

"We have nobody in the Honduran anti-guerrilla operation," said Lt. Col. James Strahn, a command information officer. "There has been no change in our policy, that we do not expect to get involved...in sensitive areas and where there is counter-guerrilla activity."

Mondale wins straw poll

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Presidential candidate Walter Mondale was the victor in a straw poll of more than 4,000 Democratic activists in Iowa and edged President Reagan in a statewide survey of both Republicans and Democrats.

The former vice president, who's from neighboring Minnesota, thus got a double boost in the first state to pick delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

At the state Democratic Party's annual fundraising dinner Saturday night, Mondale garnered 47 percent of the votes cast in an Associated Press straw poll, topping California Sen. Alan Cranston, who polled 37 percent. Of the 4,143 votes cast, Mondale got 1,948 to Cranston's 1,534.

Third was Ohio Sen. John Glenn with 5.9 percent.

Colorado Sen. Gary Hart scored 3.5 percent while 1972 nominee George McGovern, the senator from South Dakota, scored 1.8 percent.

Former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew and South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings each drew less than one percent of the vote and 2.8 percent of the Democrats said they had no preference.

In a copyright story in Sunday's editions, the Des Moines Register said a statewide poll last week showed Mondale has moved ahead of Reagan. In a sampling of 1,006 residents, the newspaper said Mondale got 51 percent of the votes, compared to 41 percent for Reagan, with eight percent undecided. Among Democrats, Mondale got 67 percent of the votes, compared with 34 percent for Glenn.

Former justice speaks out

HOUSTON (AP)—The current Supreme Court is confused about how to handle death penalty cases, as evidenced by an eleventh hour stay granted last week, and should declare the penalty unconstitutional once and for all a former justice said Sunday.

"The Supreme Court is faced by an intolerable situation which can only be solved by declaring the death penalty unconstitutional. In our country, are we to witness the mass executions of a thousand people?" Arthur Goldberg, also a former labor secretary and United Nations ambassador, said on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

The last-minute stay of execution granted a Texas convict as he lay strapped to a hospital gurney with an intravenous needle in his arm ready to receive a lethal injection is evidence of the high court's confusion, Goldberg said.

But Texas Gov. Mark White, an advocate of the death penalty, argued on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" that capital punishment was appropriate.

Currently there are more than 1,200 men and women in death row cells nationwide.

Student's body found

HAMILTON, N.Y. (AP) — The body of an epileptic Colgate University freshman from Wilton Conn., who had been missing since last Monday was found yesterday morning in a wooded area near the university, according to a spokesman.

Jonathan Beane, 18, was found at 10:25 a.m. by a search team led by a state Department of Environmental Conservation forest ranger, said Jim Leach, Colgate's director of communications.

Beane had been reported missing by his roommate Monday. He was last seen in his dormitory room at 8:30 a.m. that day, according to Police Chief James Tilbe.

Beane had left his roommate a note Monday morning, saying he was going out walking but would return for dinner, Leach said.

Symphony Band to perform

The University of Connecticut Symphony Band and Wind Ensemble will perform in concert Oct 12 at 8:15 p.m. at Von der Mehden Hall.

The concert is free, and it marks the Storrs debut of conductor Gene Young, who joined the School of Fine Arts Department of Music faculty this fall as associate professor of music.

The 65-member Symphony Band will perform "La Marche sur la Bastille," by Arthur Honnegger and "Suite Francaise" by Darius Mihaud.

Honnegger's composition was written in 1937 for "Le Quatorze Juillet," an early pageant by Romain Rollard, which was revived for the Paris Expostion in 1937. "La Marche sur la Bastille" occurs at the most dramatic moment of the play.

The piece by Milhaud "Suite Francaise," originally was written for a band, and the five parts of the suite are named after French provinces in which Allied forces fought with the French underground for the liberation of France during World War II.

The 35-member UConn Wind Ensemble will perform "Hyperprism," by Edgard Varese, and "Concerto for Wind Orchestra" by Colin McPhee.

Young says that within the four minutes it takes to perform "Hyperprism," which was written in 1923, "Varese establishes the expressive musical language of the future, becomes the liberator of sound, and assumes the role of champion of new music the world over.

"Beginning with the stunning outburst of percussion to the extraordinary use of ancient and modern sounds in combination, Varese demonstrates the bold, explosive genius that was to dominate the avant-garde in music for the next fifteen years," he said.

Composer McPhee said of his "Concerto," "at first, the music was simply a delicious confusion, a strangely sensuous and quite unfathomable art, mysteriously aerial, aeolian, filled with joy and radiance. Each night as the music started up I experienced the same sensation of freedom and indescribable freshness."

Before coming to UConn this fall, Young was a visiting professor at the University of Wisconsin and director of both the wind ensemble and symphonic band there.

He has served as assistant to the music director and assistant conductor of the American Wind Symphony Orchestra in Pittsburgh. His past experience includes guest coducting with the Hudson Valley Philharmonic Chamber Players, and the New Orleans Chamber Music Ensemble.

As a trumpeter, Young has been a member of the New Orleans Philharmonic, the Santa Fe Opera Orchestra, the United States Military Academy Band at West Point, the American Shakespeare Theater Orchestra and the St. Louis Sinfonietta.

Chamber Players show here

The UConn chamber Players will present the music of Mozart, Poulenc, and Brahms Oct. 11 at 8:15 p.m. in Von der Mehden Hall.

The UConn Chamber Players all are faculty members in the School of Fine Arts Department of Music. This concert, to be recorded by Connecticut Public Radio for delayed broadcast in December, is the first of four free concerts by the Chamber Players scheduled for Storrs, Hartford and Stamford this fall and next spring.

The program of the first concert includes Mozart's "Trio in E Flat for Clarinet, Viola, and Piano," Poulenc's "Sonata for Clarinet and Piano," and Brahm's "Quarted in G Minor for Piano, Violin, Viola, and Cello."

Featured artists are: Theodore Arm, associate professor of music, on violin; David Harman, associate professor of music on clarinet; Mary Lou Rylands, associate professor of music, on cello; Leonard Seeber, professor of music, on piano; and Laurel Thurman, lecturer in music, on viola.

New England Bach Festival at Storrs

Over its 14-year history, the New England Bach Festival has come to be known as "one of New England's cultural treasures." From a single weekend performance in 1969, the Festival has grown to include 3-1/2 weeks of concerts presented throughout New England.

Now New England Bach Festival, under the direction of Blanche Honegger Moyse, will perform J.S. Bach's "Magnificat" at Jorgensen Auditorium, Thursday, October 13 at 8:00 PM.

Written by the young Bach for Christmas 1723, the "Magnificat" is considered to be the most exuberant of Bach's great choral works. For their performance of the work, the New England Bach Festival orchestra and chorus will be joined by soprano Arleen Auger, mezzo-soprano Jan De Gaetani, tenor Ian Partridge, and baritone Sanford Sylvan. The program will also include Bach's Cantata 105 and Orchestral Suite No. 3 in D Major.

Moyse is recognized as one of America's foremost Bach experts. She began her musical career as a violinst in her native Switzerland. After touring Europe as a member of the Moyse Trio, she moved to Vermont, and helped found the Marlboro Music Festival in 1949. Moyse organized the first Bach Festival at the Brattleboro Music Center in 1968.

The New England Bach Festival is the first event in Jorgensen's 1938/84 Auditorium Series.

A new dean heads the university's oldest college

Janine D'Angelo
Campus Correspondent

He was born in Kansas and lived there until he was seven years old when his family moved to Idaho. "After attending high school in Oregon, I wasn't convinced that I was ready for college," Hugo John said," and I wasn't sure what I wanted to go to college for."

For nine years after high school, UConn's new dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources practiced tree surgery, built and repaired railroad refrigerator cars, spent eighteen months in the Army stationed in Germany, and owned and operated a service station in Minnesota. Finally, in 1964, he graduated from the University of Minnesota with a doctoral degree in forestry.

Twenty years later, John brought those years of education and, more importantly, those valuable years of experience here to UConn.

Along the way, John spent nine years with the faculty in the University of Vermont's School of Natural Resources before he took his new position as dean of UConn's college on September 1 of this year. "I really loved the University of Vermont and will always be indebted to them for all they did for me during those years," John said with a reminiscent look, "but I started going flat in my job. I needed a change in order to continue being productive."

UConn's fine reputation was one reason John was attracted to the position here. "I saw a chance to work with highly regarded people in a very good institution," he said. "You might say it was a challenge."

But challenges are nothing new to John. In 1965, while in Minnesota, he took a leave of absence to work with the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization and lived for one year in an isolated town in Nicaragua. "There was only one road out of town," he said, "and one boat that came by every three months!"

John also worked in Honduras and Guatemala, and spent two years in Colombia working again with the UNFAO and the National University there. "Universities can play a big part in assisting these underdeveloped countries," he said. "The impact of everything from our high technology to weather, and crop information can be just as great in the tropics as they are here."

According to John, more education in agriculture is needed. "We need to educate the people and put that education into practice so they can feed themselves," he said. "This all comes down to basic survival and social well-being."

Universities' roles in the international scene is one problem John feels UConn must address in the near future. However, because New England schools are relatively small compared to those in the Midwest, according to John, we have a very limited depth of resources and any tapping of those, especially human resources, will have a great impact on us natively. "That's why we need cooperation among New England universities," he said. "We need to study out scarce resources, do some crystal balling into our future needs and set some priorities."

Area universities working together is not the only form of cooperation John would like to see. According to John, it is important for all the schools within the University to work together in the development of each student. "When students leave here, they have to perform as functional citizens which is why this department should offer an agricultural education to a person with a good liberal arts background," he said. "Also the department has an obligation to offer courses to people throughout the University - we have to look at our role in a student's general education."

UConn's oldest college has certainly come a long way from being a simple agricultural school serving the rural area around Storrs. John has even greater plans to exercise its potential in the future. "I am sure there will be days when it will seem like we're not making any progress - days we'll have to put up a stick to see if we're moving," John said. "But part of my job is just getting to know this state and its people and I'm looking forward to that too!"

unable to grab the ball as Lumbruno sent it over her head towards the vacant goal.

Buckley, the senior tri-captain, headed the bouncing ball into the net and that was all the Huskies needed.

"Every game is tougher when you're undefeated," said UConn coach Len Tsantiris, who was relieved after the game.

UConn goalkeeper Laura Skaza played the entire game and made three saves, one of which was a one-on-one with Princeton's leading scorer Angie Vorhies. Skaza stood firm and blocked the shot up and over the net.

But probably the best save of the game was made by Tara Buckley. With Skaza on the ground 10 yards out of the net, Buckley stopped a shot by Princeton's Kerry Shaw, which was ticketed for the left corner of the net.

The Huskies (11-0-1) outshot Princeton 29-9, but did not dominate the play until the final moments of the game when they pressured goalies Kim Simmons with shot after shot.

Princeton, now 5-2, was shutout for the first time this season after scoring 22 goals in its first six games.

The Huskies were without the services of freshman standout Lori Kessel who has scored five goals this season.

The women's soccer team will be at home Tuesday against Brown. Brown defeated Princeton 3-1 earlier this season.

Phila. vs. Balt. The '1-95' Series

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ken Singleton, the Baltimore Orioles' designated hitter, called it the "1-95 Series."

"You can bet there'll be a lot of traffic up and down that highway," he said.

Interstate 95 is the artery that connects Baltimore and Philadelphia, two cities 110 miles apart in distance, 180 degrees apart in baseball partisanship.

The teams from those two cities are the combatants in this year's World Series, which begins here Tuesday night.

The Orioles, baseball's winningest team over the past 15 years, reached the Series by winning the American League East Division title, then defeating AL West champion Chicago in four games in the AL Championship Series.

The Orioles were last in the World Series in 1979, losing in seven games to the Pittsburgh Pirates. They are experienced, with 13 players from that team.

Since divisional play began in 1969, they have participated in a major league record seven playoffs, and they have won five pennants, also a record. They won the American League in 1969, '70, '71, and '79, and they won the World Series in 1970, beating Cincinnati in five games.

"This is a gutsy team," Singleton said. "We're coming through more this year, especially with the injuries. These are the greatest clutch players I've ever played with."

"I know we've been blessed. We've had a great year. Everyone made a contribution in the hardest of times."

Pie race to be run Tuesday

The 13th annual Great Pie race will be held Tuesday starting and finishing at the Grad Field. In order to accommodate as many participants as possible, there will be a race at 12:15 p.m. and 3:45 p.m.

Participants can run the 2.8 mile course individually or as part of a relay team. This year there are 10 age groups and six different categories of relay teams.

Teams can be formed as: a 3-person relay, 6-person relay, 6-person mixed relay, dorm relay, grad relay and faculty relay. Graduate students are not allowed to participate with a faculty team.

Rich Roberts, coordinator of recreation, who has seen all 12 previous races expects a large turnout. "A record number of runners have been showing up for the twice weekly races," Roberts said. "And I expect many of them will be participaitng in the Pie Race."

The first Pie Race, held in 1971, was a fund-raising event to assist a group of students on a Himalayan expedition. Prizes were homemade pies donated by the UConn women's league.

The race became a regular seasonal event on the fall recreation calendar the following year, and pies continued to be the prize for winners.

In 1977 all participants were given small Table Talk pies for running and in 1978, t-shirts were awarded to various winners.

touchdown pass. "I'm trying too hard," Corn said. "I have to know my abilities and my thoughts. I have to play more relaxed."

Wide receivers Brian McGillicuddy and John Fodor caught nine passes overall from Corn for their best performance of the season. But there were also a few dropped passes which hurt the Huskies. "Maybe if I didn't drop a couple it could have made a difference," McGillicuddy said. "At least this game showed we have a passing attack."

The rushing attack of the Huskies also had its problems with running back Billy Parks averaging three yards for 21 carries. "Obviously, Lehigh's strength is in their defense," Jackson said.

It is also obvious that UConn's strength is in its defense, but the defense cannot win games by itself. If the Huskies' desire to win the Yankee Conference is to be fulfilled, the Huskies will have to put an end to single-digit scoring production every weekend.

Women's soccer team beats Adelphi

Buckley scores

By Mark Pukalo
Staff Writer

In baseball, they call it the dog days of August; the time of year when you need to grit your teeth and try to squeeze out every win you can.

The women's soccer team's dog days have hit in October. They have won the last three games by one goal including a 1-0 squeaker over Princeton Saturday.

Moira Buckley, assisted by Lisa Lumbruno, scored with less than five minutes to go.

"It was a shot on goal," Lumbruno said. "The goalie came out too far and I just punched it over her head and Moira was in the right place."

Princeton goalkeeper Kim Simmons was in the game for the last ten minutes since senior captain Kelly O'Dell got injured. O'Dell played very well, making ten saves.

"It really hurt us losing Kelly," said Princeton coach Bob Malekoff. "She had played a super game up until then."

Simmons, a sophomore from Bermuda was very hesitant, coming off the bench with just ten minutes to go in a scoreless tie. She came out far from the goal to try to stop Lumbruno, but was HANOVER, N.H.—Freshman Scott Cook broke a scoreless tie with his second goal of the year with five minutes remaining in the game to lead the soccer team to a 2-0 victory over Dartmouth Sunday afternoon. With the victory, UConn extends its New England unbeaten streak to 43 games dating back to 1979.

The two teams played to a scoreless first half. The Huskies had a couple of scoring opportunities late in the half, but missed one when junior Eric Myren missed the net. UConn outshot the Green 5-2 in the half.

Freshman Greg Barger hit the post for the Huskies midway through the second half, as UConn had several scoring chances.

In the 71st minute, Dartmouth goalkeeper Jim Cisneros stopped a point blank shot by Myren. Less than three minutes later, the Huskies missed an open goal opportunity as a result of a misplayed corner kick. UConn failed to convert when a defender cleared the ball out of the area, but the Huskies outshot Dartmouth 16-5 for the match.

Cook got the game-winner with 5:35 remaining. Teammate Kieran Coffey booted a ball 75 yards from deep in Husky territory into the Dartmouth zone. Cook beat the defender to the ball, and sidestepped Dartmouth goalkeeper Jim Cisneros before booting the ball into the net.

Less than two minutes later, freshman Srdjan Grbic scored his first goal of the season to put UConn up 2-0. As the Huskies pressured Dartmouth goalie Cisneros, Grbic kicked the ball from eight yards out from the left into the right corner. Assists were credited to sophomore Matt Addington and senior Jim D'Orsaneo.

The soccer team, now 7-4-1, returns home for a Wednesday match with Yale at 3 p.m.

Lehigh triumphs, 13-7 in error-filled contest

BETHLEHEM, PA. — Another poor offensive showing by the football team put the Huskies below the .500 mark again as they lost to Lehigh 13-7, Saturday.

The vision of Larry Corn's last-play touchdown against New Hampshire last week was quickly forgotten in the first half. Corn committed four turnovers in the first quarter, wasting several scoring chances for the Huskies, who now have a 2-3 record. The only touchdown the team scored came when linebacker Norm Myers recovered a Lehigh fumble on the Engineers' 13-yard line.

Since his team has failed to score in double-digits in four of the five games this season, head coach Tom Jackson said he may be making some changes. Jackson remains unsure what needs to be done to get the offense in high gear. "I'm open to recommendations," he said. "I thought we moved the ball well against them at times. We just had a couple of dropped passes and fumbles that really hurt us."

The lack of scoring production wasted another solid effort by the defense. The UConn defense held the Engineers to 32 yards rushing on 33 carries and pressured Lehigh quarterback Marty Horn into throwing four interceptions.

Horn did manage to complete six first half passes to his favorite target, wide receiver Rennie Benn, including a 16-yard scoring pass in the second quarter. Benn has now caught 38 passes and has six touchdown catches this season for Lehigh, now 3-2.

Earlier in the second quarter, Jim Scott kicked a 32-yard field goal. He had a 21-yarder in the fourth quarter. The Huskies went as far as the Lehigh 36 in the final seconds of the game, but Corn's desperation pass went incomplete.

The win was Lehigh's sixth in a row over UConn. The Engineers won at Memorial Stadium last year 16-12 on a 34-yard touchdown pass by Benn to Tony DeSalva with less than two minutes remaining.

Corn completed 12 of 24 passes but has yet to throw a
